

SUPPORTING RESEARCH

Having opportunities available for individuals to experience art and culture on a personal basis are critical to having a community with strong cultural vitality. Communities are composed of individuals with a wide variety of interests and it is a challenge to have opportunities available that will address all of their interests.

Individuals will have a better understanding of the creative process, and develop a better appreciation of arts and culture if they have an opportunity to engage with artists. Providing individuals with opportunities to participate in the creation of art is also valuable to the cultural vitality of the community.

In order for artists to grow and develop, it is critical that there are opportunities available to help them develop their artistic skills. Artists can develop their skills through workshops which allow instruction and interaction with other artists.
